Catuaba: A herbal tea made from the bark is used for sexual impotency and lack of sexual interest, weakness, poor memory or forgetfulness.

Maca: Rather than hormone replacement therapy (HRT), millions of women are putting their faith in a remedy which has been used for 10,000 years, which is safe and amazingly effective: a cruciferous root vegetable from Peru called Maca. Anthropologist Dr Viana Muller has brought this extraordinary remedy to the attention of the Western world. "Once in a decade a remedy used by native peoples for thousands of years comes to our attention and it seems so important to health that we wonder how we ever got along without it," Dr Muller says. "Maca is that kind of supplement. Now women have an alternative to hormone replacement therapy drugs. Maca works in an entirely different and more satisfactory way for most women than Phytoestrogen herbs like black cohosh and licorice root. And men, too, find that Maca can counteract the difficulties they may experience in maintaining good sexual relationships as they age, due to a general slowing down in the output of the Endocrine Glands."

Dosage: 1 tablet daily.
